

SWIM CLUB OFFICIALS ACCUSE COUNCIL OF 'BREACH OF FAITH'

Are the children of Oakleigh to be betrayed by a breach of faith? That's the question being asked this week by Oakleigh Amateur Swimming and Life Saving Club officials, who fear that years of work for a heated pool are about to go "down the drain".

Their anxiety was sparked by a council move to defer all works, listed under a five-year plan, for review and determination of priorities.

The heated pool project was not on a revised list of 15 items, for which funds are already in hand, which will be classified together as a special fund for council buildings and other purposes.

Paper is precious!

The world faces the worst shortage of newsprint since the Second World War, 27 years ago.

Newsprint is the paper on which newspapers are printed.

The word has gone out to newspaper publishers everywhere (including Standard News-

Officials said on Monday that council had for many years been placing money in a special account to provide a heated swimming pool and a sporting complex at the Oakleigh Pool.

A club spokesman told Standard Times: "To abandon the project, or defer it indefinitely, would mean that the amount of $140,000, plus the government subsidy of at least $35,000, would be lost to the citizens and youth of Oakleigh.

"This, in our view, could only be termed a breach of moral faith to the citizens of Oakleigh and to the future youth.

"The matter of a heated pool has had the attention of council since 1968 and council has, in fact, supplied the OASC with plans of its

"Are we asking too much for the youth of Oakleigh? We would say quite definitely NO!

The secretary of Oakleigh Amateur Swimming and Life Saving Club, Mr R.G. Simpson, said that a heated pool complex, properly managed and run efficiently, was not only an asset to the community, but could also be a profit making concern.

Pool can be profitable

"It is known that the Malvern heated pool does, in fact, make a profit. More importantly, it is a service to the community as all year-round teaching of swimming and lifesaving

Blues blasted Big Bob's boys

SWIM CLUB OFFICIALS ACCUSE COUNCIL OF 'BREACH OF FAITH'

Are the children of Oakleigh to be betrayed by a breach of faith? That's the question being asked this week by Oakleigh Amateur Swimming and Life Saving Club officials, who fear that years of work for a heated pool are about to go "down the drain".

Their anxiety was sparked by a council move to defer all works, listed under a five-year plan, for review and determination of priorities.

The heated pool project was not on a revised list of 15 items, for which funds are already in hand, which will be classified together as a special fund for council buildings and other purposes.

Paper is precious!

The world faces the worst shortage of newsprint since the Second World War, 27 years ago.

Newsprint is the paper on which newspapers are printed.

The word has gone out to newspaper publishers everywhere (including Standard News-

Officials said on Monday that council had for many years been placing money in a special account to provide a heated swimming pool and a sporting complex at the Oakleigh Pool.

A club spokesman told Standard Times: "To abandon the project, or defer it indefinitely, would mean that the amount of $140,000, plus the government subsidy of at least $35,000, would be lost to the citizens and youth of Oakleigh.

"This, in our view, could only be termed a breach of moral faith to the citizens of Oakleigh and to the future youth.

"The matter of a heated pool has had the attention of council since 1968 and council has, in fact, supplied the OASC with plans of its

"Are we asking too much for the youth of Oakleigh? We would say quite definitely NO!

The secretary of Oakleigh Amateur Swimming and Life Saving Club, Mr R.G. Simpson, said that a heated pool complex, properly managed and run efficiently, was not only an asset to the community, but could also be a profit making concern.

Pool can be profitable

"It is known that the Malvern heated pool does, in fact, make a profit. More importantly, it is a service to the community as all year-round teaching of swimming and lifesaving precious!

Blues blasted Big Bob's boys

The world faces the worst shortage of newsprint since the Second World War, 27 years ago.

Newsprint is the paper on which newspapers are printed.

The word has gone out to newspaper publishers everywhere (including Standard Newspapers Ltd., publisher of this paper) that the world's big wood pulp and paper mills can no longer meet demands.

Publishers in Australia were told earlier this year not to increase current orders. The latest word is that they must be prepared to receive reduced stocks, at least until the end of 1974.

Big daily newspapers have already introduced economies in paper use and most have a program prepared for future economies. A local resident just back from the United States says some newspapers have advised readers to lodge firm orders because papers for casual readers and street sales will be strictly rationed. Some form of rationing is likely in Australia in the months ahead.

Unfortunately, prices are rising, too, so proprietors won't be saving money.

Standard Newspapers' management is watching the position closely and hopes to cushion the impact of the shortage so that the news and advertising content of its papers will not be limited more than is strictly necessary.

Standard Times: "To abandon the project, or defer it indefinitely, would mean that the amount of $140,000, plus the government subsidy of at least $35,000, would be lost to the citizens and youth of Oakleigh.

"This, in our view, could only be termed a breach of moral faith to the citizens of Oakleigh and to the future youth.

"The matter of a heated pool has had the attention of council since 1968 and council has, in fact, supplied the OASC with plans of its proposal which envisaged a sporting complex, and included a heated pool, gymnasium, social room, trampolines and squash courts.

Money raised

"Both the OASC and the Young Oakleigh Club ran a week-long, non-stop, swimming and trampolining marathon to show the enthusiasm of the youth and the citizens for this sporting centre.

"The money raised during the marathon by the OASC has been invested and is intended to be donated to council as a token of our good faith for such a project.

In view of the fact, council has provided the OASC with drawings of its proposals on a number of occasions. The fact is that council has endorsed these proposals and has instructed its architects to prepare working plans to enable tenders to be called.

"We see it as an immoral action if councillors allow this to lapse.

"It would mean that not only the children of Oakleigh, but the citizens also, could never rely on promises by council.

Simpson, said that a heated pool complex, properly managed and run efficiently, was not only an asset to the community, but could also be a profit making concern.

Pool can be profitable

"It is known that the Malvern heated pool does, in fact, make a profit. More importantly, it is a service to the community as all year-round teaching of swimming and lifesaving would take place which is without question a most important facet of life in Australia.

"The community recognises the need for such facilities for its youth, and the present government has set up a Ministry of Youth, Sport and Recreation to assist wherever possible.

"That is why a government subsidy is available.

Veto?

"Surely, then, the councillors of Oakleigh are not going to go against public opinion by vetoing a plan that will provide for recreation facilities and help to eliminate delinquency.

"We call upon all councillors of the City of Oakleigh, and in particular the councillors representing Oakleigh Ward, to fulfil promises that the heated swimming pool project be confirmed and see that funds set aside for this project will not be siphoned off to the detriment of the youth of Oakleigh.

"Surely a council of the status of the City of Oakleigh can now be bold enough to make a decision for the benefit of the youth, and the future children of its city."

Oakleigh's hopes for another premiership flag were as grey as the weather at the Junction Oval on Sunday when Prahran snatched the pennant.

And for Oaks' coach Big Bob Johnson, the loss of the premiership was a sad ending to his colorful, and highly successful, career with the side he built from also-rans to top dogs of the Victorian Football Association.

It was perhaps a bigger blow than his first game with the Oaks, when, 35 minutes after taking the field for the first time, he suffered a badly broken leg that almost put "paid" to his playing career, back in 1970.

Although he refuses to commit himself on the subject of his future, a strong tip is that he will move to Melbourne next season as non-playing coach of the Demons.

● Oakleigh's failing fortunes were mirrored in the unsmiling face of coach Big Bob Johnson, pictured pondering a vital move in the battle for top honors. With him are club officials.

Our sporting Roundman was at the Junction Oval on Sunday. Read his comments on the game on the back page.

PRECIOUS!

The world faces the worst shortage of newsprint since the Second World War, 27 years ago.

Newsprint is the paper on which newspapers are printed.

The word has gone out to newspaper publishers everywhere (including Standard Newspapers Ltd., publisher of this paper) that the world's big wood pulp and paper mills can no longer meet demands.

Publishers in Australia were told earlier this year not to increase current orders. The latest word is that they must be prepared to receive reduced stocks, at least until the end of 1974.

Big daily newspapers have already introduced economies in paper use and most have a program prepared for future economies. A local resident just back from the United States says some newspapers have advised readers to lodge firm orders because papers for casual readers and street sales will be strictly rationed. Some form of rationing is likely in Australia in the months ahead.

Unfortunately, prices are rising, too, so proprietors won't be saving money.

Standard Newspapers' management is watching the position closely and hopes to cushion the impact of the shortage so that the news and advertising content of its papers will not be limited more than is strictly necessary.

Standard Times: "To abandon the project, or defer it indefinitely, would mean that the amount of $140,000, plus the government subsidy of at least $35,000, would be lost to the citizens and youth of Oakleigh.

"This, in our view, could only be termed a breach of moral faith to the citizens of Oakleigh and to the future youth.

"The matter of a heated pool has had the attention of council since 1968 and council has, in fact, supplied the OASC with plans of its proposal which envisaged a sporting complex, and included a heated pool, gymnasium, social room, trampolines and squash courts.

Money raised

"Both the OASC and the Young Oakleigh Club ran a week-long, non-stop, swimming and trampolining marathon to show the enthusiasm of the youth and the citizens for this sporting centre.

"The money raised during the marathon by the OASC has been invested and is intended to be donated to council as a token of our good faith for such a project.

In view of the fact, council has provided the OASC with drawings of its proposals on a number of occasions. The fact is that council has endorsed these proposals and has instructed its architects to prepare working plans to enable tenders to be called.

"We see it as an immoral action if councillors allow this to lapse.

"It would mean that not only the children of Oakleigh, but the citizens also, could never rely on promises by council.

Spokesman told Simpson, said that a heated pool complex, properly managed and run efficiently, was not only an asset to the community, but could also be a profit making concern.

Pool can be profitable

"It is known that the Malvern heated pool does, in fact, make a profit. More importantly, it is a service to the community as all year-round teaching of swimming and lifesaving would take place which is without question a most important facet of life in Australia.

"The community recognises the need for such facilities for its youth, and the present government has set up a Ministry of Youth, Sport and Recreation to assist wherever possible.

"That is why a government subsidy is available.

Veto?

"Surely, then, the councillors of Oakleigh are not going to go against public opinion by vetoing a plan that will provide for recreation facilities and help to eliminate delinquency.

"We call upon all councillors of the City of Oakleigh, and in particular the councillors representing Oakleigh Ward, to fulfil promises that the heated swimming pool project be confirmed and see that funds set aside for this project will not be siphoned off to the detriment of the youth of Oakleigh.

"Surely a council of the status of the City of Oakleigh can now be bold enough to make a decision for the benefit of the youth, and the future children of its city."

Oakleigh's hopes for another premiership flag were as grey as the weather at the Junction Oval on Sunday when Prahran snatched the pennant.

And for Oaks' coach Big Bob Johnson, the loss of the premiership was a sad ending to his colorful, and highly successful, career with the side he built from also-rans to top dogs of the Victorian Football Association.

It was perhaps a bigger blow than his first game with the Oaks, when, 35 minutes after taking the field for the first time, he suffered a badly broken leg that almost put "paid" to his playing career, back in 1970.

Although he refuses to commit himself on the subject of his future, a strong tip is that he will move to Melbourne next season as non-playing coach of the Demons.

● Oakleigh's failing fortunes were mirrored in the unsmiling face of coach Big Bob Johnson, pictured pondering a vital move in the battle for top honors. With him are club officials.

Our sporting Roundsmen was at the Junction Oval on Sunday. Read his comments on the game on the back page.